Why are infant and childhood immunizations so important?

The Indiana State Department of Health, says these shots protect children from fourteen diseases: measles, mumps, rubella (German Measles), diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis (whooping cough), polio, Haemophilus influenzae type b (Hib), hepatitis A, hepatitis B, pneumococcal infections, rotavirus, influenza, and chickenpox.

By getting your child immunized, you will be fighting disease in two ways. First, you will be protecting your own child. Secondly, since healthy children don't spread disease, you will be protecting other children as well.

What about insurance coverage?

Childhood vaccinations are covered by most insurance plans. Different plans cover different amounts. Contact your insurance plan for specifics.

We have made every effort to include all providers in our listing. However, even with our best efforts, this list may be incomplete.
